In the graded system it is thought well in many schools to dispense with the closing exercises. The bell is struck or a chord sounded on the piano at the usual hour of closing. After that, any class may quietly withdraw from the room when it so desires, taking pains not to disturb other classes which still linger. A fixed hour of closing often defeats the end for which the teacher has been working throughout the lesson period. The plan of no closing exercises enables her to finish the lesson and make the application in an effective way. Visitors to graded schools have often noted with surprise and pleasure the interest shown by classes which have lingered ten, fifteen or twenty minutes to finish their work, instead of bolting for the door at...
