Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Discoveries in the Bacon Problem In publishing this little pamphlet, I am in the position of a man who is in pursuit of thieves who have robbed him. Indeed, I am told it is useless my trying to recover my stolen property, for the modern literary thief, having robbed an author of his labours, is at liberty to blow out his victims brains with the weapon he has stolen. It is a peculiarity of the Bacon-Shakespeare problem that it affords endless opportunities for the malice of private enemies, and the latest form of literary persecution is to extinguish a writer by means of his own discoveries and writings. This is very easily effected by unscrupulous persons, who, oblivious of the rights of private property, would pluck out even the heart of Hamlets mystery by prying into his portmanteau or papers. To lovers of fair-play I must leave the judgment, whether I have been robbed of the discoveries which form the argument of the following chapters, and which, by word of mouth, have been handed about London some little time I lay claim to these discoveries, and everybody knows whence they came from. It is very easy to cut a man out by means of his own labours. It may not, be a very pleasant process for the sufferer, but it can be borne, for is it not his own work after all? The truth of being and the truth of knowing are all one. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
