AN a very hot day in July, a boy called at my house with a gentlemans card, saying that a lady had sent him to request me to visit a young man, who was sick. Both the lady and the young man were strangers to me. I had never heard of either of them. They resided more than three miles from me, in another city; and, as I understood, the lady was an attendant upon the ministry of another clergyman, who was absent from home. I could not learn from the boy why she should have sent for me. I was very much occupied, the day was intensely hot, the place was distant, many other clergymen were more convenient to it; and I felt disposed, for these reasons, to excuse myself from going. As I was considering the matter, the boy, as if reading my thoughts, spoke out earnestly, She said you must come. I went, though I felt it to be a hardship. Finding the street and the number of the house, by the card which was sent to me, I rang the bell, and inquired for the young man, whose name was on the card. I was shown to his room. He was seated in an easy-chair, with a book in his hand, and appeared somewhat pale and feeble, but not very sick. He rose to receive me. I told him who I was, and that the boy who...
